

I have no reverence but for sensible books, and consequently not for a great number; and had rather have read fewer than I have than more.